

Lifelong learning access policy

University of Central Punjab focuses on lifelong learning approach whether in personal or professional contexts which is continuous and self-motivated. The focus would be on enhancing the understanding of the world around us, which provide us with more and better opportunities to improve the quality of life.

UCP promote lifelong learning in the classrooms as well as in campus for all internal stakeholders. Teachers who adopt a lifelong learning mindset have access to information and use it to collaborate with others. Learning teachers also view mistakes and challenges as part of the learning process rather than as failures.

The approach turns teachers into lifelong learners as it can help them succeed at their Job, can help their brain stay healthy, stay connected and stay fulfilled.

Teachers must focus on the keeping a list of things that interest them, read every day, listen to podcasts, and build relationship with industry leaders to engage themselves in lifelong learning.

This approach turns students into lifelong learners to develop innovation skills, to encourage critical thinking, to encourage independent learning, to set smart goals and to use technology.

The entire population of university has equal opportunities to learn, grow and think without thinking about any ethnicity, religion, disability, immigration status or gender.
